

HOUSE COMMITTEE HEARS PLEAS FOR NEW TRANSFER BILL

Measure Presented to District Body by Citizens' Chairman.

An entirely new universal transfer bill was presented today to the House District Committee by Charles W. Darr, chairman of the Citizens' Conference on Universal Transfer, at the special hearing this morning. While over an hour was given to a discussion of the transfer question, no conclusion was reached.

Only two persons were heard this morning—Mr. Darr and P. V. Keating, of the Citizens' Conference. Mr. Darr presented the proposed bill, and Mr. Keating pointed out the weaknesses of the transfer bill passed by the Senate, as viewed by the citizens' committee.

Both declared that the people of the District were not interested in either of any bill, but that some bill which would result in the issuance of universal transfers be enacted as soon as possible.

The proposed new bill was declared to be, in the opinion of the citizens' committee, a more effective measure than that passed by the Senate.

When the time for the hearing arrived only three members of the committee were present, and the room was filled with representatives of citizens' clubs, and commercial organizations and of the street railway companies.

In the room were George E. Hamilton, president of the Capital Traction Company; D. S. Carr, general manager of the same company; Clarence P. King, president of the Citizens' Club; and J. E. Moffett, superintendent of the Washington Railway and Electric Company; E. J. Sullivan, P. J. Ryan, attorney for Central Labor Union; W. A. Foster, Evans Tucker, Col. George A. Arms, E. C. Graham, William McK. Clayton, representatives of the District Electric Railway Commission, and other representatives of citizens organizations and the public service corporations.

Committee Members Absent.

Congressman Johnson, chairman of the committee, was plainly disappointed when at noon only four members besides himself were in the room.

The Republican caucus was blamed for some of the absences. On a vote the five members present, Congressman George, Dyer, Anderson, Lohbeck, and Redfield, favored proceeding with the hearing. Mr. Adams, Mr. O'Shaughnessy, and Mr. Dineen were absent.

Mr. Darr reviewed the work of the citizens' conference.

"After drawing a bill of our own we felt that we were willing to take half a loaf rather than none. It there were no hearings," Mr. Darr said.

"But since the House committee has agreed to a hearing and will probably make amendments to the bill, we have decided to ask for a transfer at any meeting point."

Mr. Keating feared that the Senate bill would not give transfers, and while the citizens' conference asked the adoption of a new bill, its chief concern was to get the House committee to agree to the issuance of free transfers. He took up the Senate bill in detail, pointing out what were considered to be weak features.

Congressman Anderson asked Mr. Keating why the citizens were not anxious about the passage of the new bill.

"If you feel that the Senate bill will give us transfers, then we are agreeable to its passage," replied Mr. Keating.

The committee went into executive session before Mr. Keating had completed his explanation of the Senate bill.

Express Regret at Pastor's Departure

Resolutions expressing the appreciation of the work done by the Rev. C. F. Bergner, for the past eight years pastor of the Zion Lutheran Church, as the voice of the Lutheran Ministerial Association of this city, were today presented to the Rev. Bergner.

Through its president, the Rev. F. C. Huddle, and its secretary, the Rev. C. H. Butler, the association expressed regret that the Rev. Bergner was leaving Washington to take up new duties. The Rev. Bergner has accepted a call from the Bedford Street German-English Lutheran Church, in Cumberland, Md., and will leave to begin his work on March 24.

Julia Murdock's Ideal of Character Is Seen in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

An episode unprecedented in Washington's theatrical history took place in the New National Theater last evening, when at the close of the third act, in response to continued and tumultuous applause, and cries for "Author, author!" Kate Douglas Wiggin, a guest of President and Mrs. Taft, in the Presidential box, arose and responded graciously to the ovation accorded her. The President and many others in the audience were drying the tears that had been brought to the surface in response to the consummate acting of dainty little Miss Edith Tallaferra when she had handed the wedding ring to Mr. Simpson and had asked him to place it on Mrs. Simpson's hand "in the right way."

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" was a beautiful book, but when news came that it was to be made into a play, those who were familiar with the little heroine's history wondered how it could be possible to take all of those little girl incidents and make them into a drama, for the book was little more than a biography of Rebecca Rowena Randall's life from day to day, and no matter how interesting biographies may be, they do not, as a usual rule, furnish fertile material for a drama, for many reasons.

But those who have seen this charming idyll of girlhood as interpreted by Miss Tallaferra this week at the New National, and those others to whom the play is to be experienced, find it a delight, for the play is not necessarily a play in order to be amusing and interesting.

Character of Rebecca An Attractive One.

The character of the little New England girl with the big, big heart, is an attractive one, and an appealing one as well, and she has proved as lovable in the play as in the book. The simplicity of her nature, her artlessness, her naive brightness, the poetry and beauty of her infant philosophy, all of these have been retained in the play, and in the hands of Miss Tallaferra, Rebecca is to the mind of the writer, twice as nice to meet as the one who, until this season, lived only between the covers of Mrs. Wiggin's book.

Many of the incidents which made the book so delightful, such as the selling of the soap, the quest for Mrs. Simpson's wedding ring, the festival in the barn, Rebecca's escape from the brick house in the rainstorm, and her meeting with Adam Ladd have been preserved. Mrs. Wiggin and her co-authors, Mrs. Charlotte Thompson, have kept away from the ordinary run of New England plays. The village pump, so long an institution in the plays depicting this New England country, is conspicuous by its absence. So is the commonly accepted type of New England native who chews upon a straw, and talks through his nose, dropping his R's and broadening his A's. The sordid side of that cold and emotionless New England life, which the authors have devoted themselves to showing pictures of the young girls, their friends, their misadventures, their joys, and their sorrows. They seem to have more surely struck the note of humanity than have the men who write for the stage.

Possibly this may be explained as woman's intuition; it may be the delicacy of feeling which the authors, being closer, more intimate acquaintances with the matters of family and home. Whatever it is, the fact remains that the play is a masterpiece of the public in "Rebecca," a play that is wholesome, uplifting, and of a moral tendency, yet tremendously entertaining, full of dramatic power, while it is, at the same time, deliciously simple and sweet.

New England Spirit Is Seen Throughout.

Mrs. Wiggin has caught the spirit of New England, with its grim strip on life, and its stern philosophy of living. Against the background of the bleak, drear, uneventful lives of its people she has set a group of youngsters, chief among whom is Rebecca, a tempestuous spirit, who struggles against the odds and triumphs, who is placed above her, and overcomes obstacles, winning finally love and joy and warmth, even in the Puritan hearts of her family and companions. Rebecca is at once one of the most charming, winsome, and wistful of stage creations of the day. She tugs at the heart by her pitiful desire to live according to rule, and her pathetic attempts to gain the love of those about her, while she enchants by her charming nature and her ideal of character. She makes this little girl one of the most delightful personalities ever presented on the stage, and this is said without reservation of any kind. The story of youth and the fine influence of Rebecca's girlish nature are set forth in Miss Tallaferra's interpretation with an appealing power, and she is surrounded by a cast that is most excellent. The Mrs. Perkins of Ada Deaves is one of the best pieces of character acting that has been seen in Washington for some time. Hayward Ginn, as Adam Ladd, is a delight. Aunt Miranda and Aunt Jane, played respectively by Marie L. Day and Edna Glassford, are excellent. There is a group of little girl friends of Rebecca, including Emma Perkins, by Leda Fennell; Clara Belle Simpson, by Violet Mesereau; Minnie Smellie, by Clara Mesereau; Alice Robinson, by Edna Plagrath; Abner Simpson, by Sam Colt, who give adequate portrayals of the village children. As Abigail Flagg, Edwin Smedley goes in for a very small part, and as Jeremiah Cobb, Archie Boyd charms with his humor and simplicity.

Daughter of Famous Burlesque Comedian.

Viola Portescue, who plays Mrs. Simpson, is a daughter of the late George K. Portescue, the old-time burlesque comedian of a quarter of a century ago, who is remembered for his work in "Evangeline." Of him it was once said that he had a pound for every day in the year, and one left over for leap year, as he tipped the scales at 366 pounds. The daughter is the antithesis of the father, as she is slender even to thinness, which makes her an ideal representative of the hungry and ill-fed Mrs. Simpson.

All of the characters in the play are quaint portraits, never overdrawn, of fine, homely New England people, who are intensely human.

Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger have staged this New England idyll with a wealth of beautiful scenery and realistic effects. Rebecca's arrival in the old-fashioned stage coach, the terrific rainstorm, the wreck and the funeral from the home of her aunts, and the festival in the barn, are among the notable stage pictures of the season.

JULIA MURDOCK.

Tomorrow Miss Murdock will review "The Common Law," which is being produced in the Columbia Theater this week.

Arion Dance Tonight.

A dance and informal musical program will form the anniversary celebration of the Arion Gesangsverein tonight. The party will be held at the Arion club home, 106 E street northwest, where the Arion club members and their associates on the entertainment committee, have charge of the arrangements.

Milady's Toilet Table By Mme. D'VILLE

The electric needle can be resorted to for the removal of superfluous hairs, but the operation is expensive and requires a first-class operator. Wild hairs can be quickly and easily removed by the application of delicate paste. Mix enough powdered deodorant with water and cover the hairy area, apply with a brush after two or three minutes; then wash the skin and the hairs will be gone.

A clear, soft and satiny complexion can be achieved by rubbing the face, neck and arms gently each morning with a solution made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in a half pint of witch hazel. This is a wonderful complexion beautifier and prevents growth of hair.

To reduce swellings, allay inflammation, to stop ache in back or joints, to relieve pain from strain, bruise, sore muscles or any cause, apply Mother's Salve before retiring, rubbing in well. It is useful for neuralgia, headache, rheumatism, lumbago, etc. The world never saw its equal as a pain reliever.

Don't catch cold washing your head. To make a dry shampoo that cleans the scalp and hair, put a cupful of cornmeal in a fruit jar, add contents of an original package of theoro, and shake well together. Sprinkle a spoonful on the head and brush well through the hair. It will make the hair light, fluffy and beautifully lustrous.

NATION MAY PAY LAST TRIBUTE TO OLD BATTLESHIP

Plan to Suspend All Business When Maine Is Buried at Sea.

A movement of nation-wide force has been inaugurated to give the whole country an opportunity to participate in the funeral of the old battleship Maine when the wreck of that vessel is towed out to sea on Saturday and sunk in the waters of the Atlantic ocean.

It is planned, that for five minutes, all activities, of whatever nature and in whatever place, be suspended, and that the work of a nation and a nation's people pause until the old wreck sinks beneath the waves.

Furthermore, the suggestion is made by Rear Admiral Sigbee, who commanded the Maine at the time she was blown up in Havana harbor, that the new Maine, at the hour the old vessel is being laid to rest, ascend the Hudson and fire a salute opposite the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, in Riverside drive. The salute to be executed at the exact moment the wreck disappears beneath the water.

Whether or not the people of the country respond to the movement, it is positive that the entire American navy is supporting it, and that even though the busy people on shore do not drop their work for a few minutes at this time, the navy will come to a standstill.

It is pointed out that the Americans could hardly do less to honor the old battleship than the Cubans will do. The people of that republic will not only show every honor to the wreck and to the American men-of-war, but a public funeral will be held in Havana and all traffic in Havana harbor will come to a standstill during the sinking of the Maine.

Fitting naval ceremonies will take place when the army engineers tow the wreck out to sea. Two cruisers will accompany the wreck and other tenders will go along. A salute will be fired by the cruisers and taps sounded. The crews of all vessels will be mustered on deck.

After the wreck is sunk, the cruisers will sail at once for Hampton Roads. The people of that republic will not board. Later still a naval funeral will take place when the officers and sailors are buried in Arlington.

Chamber of Commerce Gets Resolutions From Typographical Union.

Parcels post and patronizing home industry occupied the attention of the Chamber of Commerce at its monthly meeting last night. James L. Cowles, secretary of the Postal Progress League, delivered an address on the parcels post explaining its advantages and predicting that a parcels post bill would soon be enacted. Congressman Sulzer, who was to have made an address before the Chamber, was unable to be present.

Home industry was brought up by George G. Seibold, secretary of the Columbia Typographical Union, who had been instructed by the union to present resolutions urging Washington business men to have their printing done in Washington. It was alleged that 60 per cent of the printing used in Washington is done by concerns in other cities. Mr. Seibold urged that the Chamber adopt a resolution calling upon its members to patronize home printing plants. The motion stirred up debate in which the whole question of trading at home was discussed. H. H. Glasie offered a substitute motion that a committee be appointed to investigate the reasons why printing is sent out of the city to be done elsewhere, and to report its findings to the board of directors. This substitute was agreed to by Mr. Seibold and was adopted unanimously.

The Works bill proposing to extend the term of President of the United States to six years, and to limit the term of any President to a single one, was brought up by Washington Topham, who moved that the Chamber instruct the board of directors to refer the committee on law and legislation.

How to Keep Sponges Sweet and Springy

Most people find sponges hard to keep clean and free from slime, and for this reason have discarded them entirely. However, it is easy to keep them clean and sweet if—in addition to rinsing in clean, warm water after being used—they are boiled once a week in water to which has been added a teaspoonful of Gold Dust washing powder, and then rinsed through several clear, warm waters. Wash-cloths should also be boiled in Gold Dust suds and thoroughly rinsed, sunned and ironed. Those of this linen crash are more desirable than heavy ones.
